History of A.I.C.D.

The Australian Institute of Classical Dance Inc. (A.I.C.D.) was formed in 1991 by Marilyn Jones O.B.E., following her receipt of a prestigious Creative Arts Fellowship from the Australian Government.

The Institute has a board composed of eminent members of the dance community. It was set up to oversee and encourage the development of Australian classical ballet. It assists teachers and students of classical dance in Australia by providing a national focus for the development of this important art form. By co-operating with existing recognised dance organisations, it encourages research and the development of dance.

Since its inception, the A.I.C.D. has aimed to provide a forum for discussion on all aspects of dance and actively lobbies for classical dance in the political and educational arena.

The A.I.C.D., also acts as an assessment body, initiates workshops, runs summer schools, conventions and seminars and offers both National and International scholarships to Australian dancers and choreographers.

From its beginning, the Institute has played an important and vital role in Australia's cultural life.

The A.I.C.D. is a not for profit organisation with branches in most states of Australia. Members of the state committees serve for the betterment of classical dance in Australia, and to give support and assistance to teachers, students and choreographers in order that they can "follow their dreams" and assist with both current trends and respected traditions to stay relevant and compete successfully on both a national and international arena.

The A.I.C.D. offers various awards and scholarships throughout the year to deserving recipients, and many of the events run by the state committees are to raise funds in order for these scholarships and awards to come into fruition.

The A.I.C.D. is always looking at new, innovative ways in which they can encourage and support teachers, dancers and choreographers in the development and expansion of their technical skills and artistry through further education in the art form.

The Borovansky Syllabus

Czech-born Edouard Borovansky first came to Australia in 1929 with the company of the famous ballerina Anna Pavlova. He returned in 1938 with a Ballets Russes Company called (at that time) The Covent Garden Russian Ballet.

Borovansky had persuaded his Russian-born wife Xenia – a fine ballet teacher who had her own school in Berlin – to accompany him to Australia, because he had decided to remain here at the end of the tour. World War II erupted in Europe in September 1939.

His idea was to start a ballet school where Xenia’s marvellous teaching skills could be utilised, hoping eventually to form an Australian ballet company.

The Ballets Russes Company displayed techniques and styles of dance that were not being taught in Australia. When the Borovansky’s Academy of Russian Ballet opened its studios in Melbourne in 1939, eager young ballet students and ballet lovers flocked to them to learn.

Xenia was the central pillar of classical ballet teaching, passing on the technique and style in which she had been trained in Russia.

The Borovansky Ballet Company was created, and first performed in 1940. This company was comprised of mainly Australian dancers from the Borovansky’s school, featuring some artists who had remained in Australia after their tour.

Between 1940 and 1959, the company toured regularly throughout Australia, becoming a much-loved part of the Australian performing arts scene.

After Edouard Borovansky’s death in 1959, Peggy van Praagh came from England to direct the company until the end of its current contract. Plans were begun for a new company, The Australian Ballet, which made its debut in November 1962.

Xenia maintained the school in Melbourne, eventually deciding to develop an Australian system for teaching ballet, based on her own Russian schooling.

Other methods, developed and administered from London, were being taken up in Australia at the time. Xenia wanted her syllabus to be administered and examined within Australia, and that is how it remains today.

In 1992, the society administering the Borovansky method (which had undergone a number of name changes over the years) came under the umbrella of the Australian Institute of Classical Dance. Regularly updated, this Borovansky examination syllabus was revised by a panel of examiners and teachers in January 2012. Current updates commenced in 2020.

Associate Diploma

Through RPL—2

Once you have submitted your application for Associate Diploma status to the Artistic Director, your application goes before the A.I.C.D. Examination Board for approval.

The Artistic Director will then contact you and confirm whether your application for RPL has been successful or unsuccessful and whether you will be required to sit the Associate Diploma Examination.

When the application for RPL is deemed successful, you will need to pay the Associate Diploma Fee by logging in to the website at ballet.org.au. Go to the “Shop” and click on Teacher Qualifications, then click on “Associate Teachers Fee”. You will need to be logged in as a member to access

Your A.I.C.D. Associate Diploma Certificate will be posted to you and you will be entitled to use the letters A. AICD after your name.

The Artistic Director and the A.I.C.D. Examination Board may waive any or all of the above requirements based on prior professional dance or teaching experience; or circumstance.

*“Behind every great dancer on stage,
is a great dance teacher standing in the wings, looking on with the utmost care”*

Rationale of the Syllabus

The general philosophy of Xenia Borovansky and the original syllabus has been retained over the years, through several reviews and updates.

This philosophy includes the following premises:

The syllabus has always been an examination syllabus rather than a training 'method' and should be regarded separately from the work covered in general non-syllabus ballet classes. This encourages all-round expertise of both the teacher and the student.

The creation of enchaînements early in the syllabus, rather than separately presented steps, is to show each step in context. This engenders appropriate dynamics and a fluid style.

The exclusion from the syllabus of specific ports de bras and embellishments is to allow each teacher to express a personal style. This encourages artistry.

Borovansky Arms

1st, 2nd & 3rd

Borovansky arms follow the Russian method, for third position one arm is in 2nd position and the other is in 5th position.

Bras Croisé position of arms.

Aims of the Syllabus

This syllabus aims to foster and develop;

- * A love of dance and
- * An awareness of ballet as a performing art in both recreational and vocational students.
- * Students of vocational and non-vocational aspirations are equally well-served.
- * The need for flexibility in teaching and in examining a wide variety of body shapes, sizes and capabilities is recognised.
- * Students are offered grades which are appropriate to their individual level of physical development and ability.
- * Technical difficulty increases gradationally.
- * Dance quality, style, expressiveness and musicality are encouraged from the beginning, and are progressively developed.
- * Students are exposed to a wider range of movements than appeared in earlier versions of the syllabus.
- * Steps are taught in a safe and continuous progression through all the grades. Repetitious movements have been replaced with safer, more suitable and efficient alternatives, in line with “Safe dance” principles.
- * Students are taught basic human anatomy and simple principles of physiology as it relates to ballet technique. Knowledge and understanding is developed alongside skills.
- * An awareness of dance history and context is cultivated by some sequences, and in particular by set dances.
- * Character dance steps are integrated in the syllabus, reflecting the syllabus’ heritage in the Borovansky Ballet Company, famed for its wholehearted vigorous approach to national dance.

Assessment Outcomes

Candidates will be notified on the day of their assessment whether they were successful or not.

Successful candidates will receive the A.I.C.D. Associate Diploma Certificate and will be entitled to use the letters A. AICD after their name.

They are also entitled to send students for assessment/examination under the Borovansky syllabus up to and including Grade 6.

If in the assessor’s judgement, the candidate is not yet ready to receive the Associate status from the A.I.C.D., those areas requiring improvement will be clearly stated during the discussion section of the assessment. The candidate may subsequently re-apply to take the assessment again.

Success

Success is “the accomplishment of an aim or purpose”, as the Oxford dictionary states.

It’s that mythical finish line we cross when we accomplish our goals. It’s something we all aim for. There are times however when we need a little inspirational or motivational support to keep our journey towards success going.

Associate Diploma

Privileges of Associate Diploma

Anyone holding The Australian Institute of Classical Dance – Associate Diploma is entitled to use the letters A. AICD following their name.

A holder of the Associate Diploma may teach any grade or major level from the Borovansky syllabus, however, you may only submit students for examination up to Grade 6.

If you are submitting students for Major Examinations and Major Assessments, you must be teaching in a school that has a Licentiate or Fellow as part of the staff or make separate representation to the A.I.C.D. Examination Board for a waiver.

The A.I.C.D. conducts regular seminars and workshops for teachers of the Borovansky syllabus, in most participating states of Australia. These are designed to refresh the syllabus and answer any questions in regard technique and content.

Major seminars are conducted on a yearly basis and address specific areas of the syllabus.

The A.I.C.D. encourages all teachers to treat the Associate Diploma as a stepping stone to the Licentiate Diploma, rather than as an end goal in itself. As part of your ongoing professional development, you should be seeking to achieve the higher teaching qualification.

For Associate Diploma teachers that are operating their own schools, we encourage you to contact your state coordinator to determine an agreed path to achieving your Licentiate Diploma. (Contact details for State Coordinators is available on the website under CONTACTS)

Associate Diploma Through Assessment

This assessment is for teachers who want to teach the Borovansky syllabus but have limited teaching experience in classical ballet, do not have the necessary qualifications for RPL, or for those who are progressing from the Affiliate program who have been teaching for at least 12 months under the 'mentor path'.

In order to apply for the Associate Diploma Teaching Assessment you must:

1. Be a minimum of 18 years of age
2. Be or become a financial member of the A.I.C.D.
3. Hold a current Working with Children card or equivalent
4. Hold the A.I.C.D. Advanced I Certificate or equivalent from a recognised ballet examination society or have completed the A.I.C.D. Affiliate Teacher Program
5. Contact the Artistic Director at: director.aicd@ballet.org.au and complete the application form
6. Pass the Associate Diploma Demonstration class which includes a 1-hour non-syllabus class and up to 20 minutes of questions
7. Submit a letter of recommendation from a recognised ballet teacher or mentor, attesting to your ethical behaviour and professional integrity as a teacher
8. Show evidence of Professional development
9. Be proficient in Safe Dance Practices
10. Show awareness of the current Child Protection laws

For candidates progressing through the Affiliate stream, you must also:

1. Be under the 'mentor program' with a registered A.I.C.D. teacher
2. Have been teaching the Borovansky syllabus for at least 12 months
3. Have submitted all Affiliate Task documentation

The Assessment Class

Candidates will give a one hour, non-syllabus demonstration class, with a minimum of five students and a maximum of ten, before an independent assessor/s.

The candidate may choose the class level, but it should be aimed at a level from Grade 2—Grade 5.

Candidates must demonstrate the development of the students' abilities in several exercises through coaching and repetition, rather than just presenting a succession of exercises only executed once.

The class may have some pre-preparation but should be given in such a way that the candidate demonstrates their teaching practices and methodology.

It should be succinct and at all times take into account the age and abilities of the student as well as reflect Safe Dance practices.

Some Character dance exercises should be included.

Students of a range of abilities may be presented.
